Fieldguide hiring team

Senior Product Designer

I am applying for the Senior Product Designer role on Fieldguide's Audit team. Auditors spend their days proving a business can be trusted. A lot of that day is evidence, review, and the same checks again. The software should take that repetition off their plate and leave the judgment with them.

I have not designed audit software. I have spent seven years on work that has to be right, with an AI step a person can see and correct. At Entrata I led the design for a flow that reads income documents and fills an affordable-housing certification. A long application became an upload. Hundreds of teams entered, and we won Most Likely to Land a New Logo. A separate upload matches a spreadsheet to leases, sorts the rows into three buckets, and writes nothing until someone confirms.

When one promotion needed to hold more than one offer, staff already knew the Pricing screen, so we extended that screen. Within the first couple of months, more than 8,000 offers used the new rules. I was also the product manager and designer for a remote team of six engineers. I framed the problem with them and stayed through ship.

At FamilySearch I led 26 discovery experiences on one loop, and I worked with outside designers so it stayed one product. The next year we kept 95% more members and 107% more other people. I tightened how that team worked so we moved faster and ran into fewer surprises.

I use AI when I prototype. I live in Pleasant Grove, Utah, and I work remotely in the United States. I would like to walk you through the work.

Sincerely,
Cody Duke
