Outsmart hiring team

Principal Product Designer

I am applying for the Principal Product Designer role at Outsmart. A student who is done with lectures and debt still has to come back tomorrow. The design job is a next step that is obvious, an interface that looks cared for, and a system that can grow without becoming a pile of one-off screens.

At FamilySearch, beginners arrived hoping to feel a connection and met a toolbox built for hobbyists. I led product design for 26 personalized discovery experiences. Each one started from a person already in the tree and offered one next action. Retention rose 95% for members and 107% for other users versus the prior year. I set that loop as the standard and guided outside designers so the volume stayed one product.

At Entrata I spent seven years on that same ownership. For about a year I was Product Lead with an engineering team, from the problem through ship. When we redesigned how staff create rental promotions, we extended the Pricing pattern people already used. After launch, 8,290 specials used the new targeting rules. Homebody, the resident app, reached 4.4 out of 5 on iOS from more than 600 reviews in its first six months. I use AI to prototype, and I have designed AI in the product so a person can still review the result.

I have not managed a team of product designers, and I have not designed a college. I have led design, guided other designers on a shared system, and shipped consumer work people came back to. I live in Pleasant Grove, so the Lehi office is a drive I can make. I would welcome the chance to walk you through the work.

Sincerely,

Cody Duke
